CIRI EXPANDS SHAREHOLDER AND DESCENDANT OPPORTUNITIES

Some of the opportunities, programs and resources for CIRI shareholders and descendants include (left to right) the annual Job and Resource Fair, the CIRI C3 Experience, SPC youth representative positions and AlaskaNativeHire.com.

For 45 years, CIRI has developed business ventures across Alaska and beyond, with the well-being of current and future shareholders at the center of every decision. CIRI supports its shareholders and their descendants with employment resources, Alaska Native artist opportunities and a variety of youth programs.

“Shareholder and descendant programs serve an essential purpose in helping CIRI fulfill its mission,” said Darla Graham, a CIRI shareholder and manager of shareholder programs at CIRI. “With programs aimed at creating opportunities for shareholders and descendants and getting them more involved in CIRI activities, we deepen shareholder engagement and nurture and support the next generation.”

Listed below are a few of the programs and resources currently offered by CIRI, as well as a new youth opportunity, the CIRI C3 Experience, coming this summer.

Alaska Native Hire

CIRI created AlaskaNativeHire.com to help its shareholders, descendants and other Alaska Native people find jobs. Job seekers can search for and apply for suitable jobs, and Alaska businesses can search job seeker profiles to locate available talent.

An enhanced version of the site was unveiled in October 2017 and offers the following features:

- Job seekers are invited to create a profile highlighting their experience, skills, education and employment history. This information converts to a customized resume that can be downloaded by both the job seeker and employers. Open jobs can be browsed by location, company, job title and category. AlaskaNativeHire.com will also notify job seekers of open positions for which they qualify. Cost to job seekers is always free.
- Employers can post open positions across web and mobile platforms, search candidates by skill set, location and experience, and create targeted advertisements to attract talent.

CIRI C3 Experience

With the goal of fostering leadership skills and helping prepare young shareholders and descendants for college and careers, the CIRI C3 Experience is a camp like no other – a three-day, two-night retreat where participants will hear from Alaska Native professionals, engage in collaborative exercises to hone their skills to successfully apply for college, draft the perfect essay, learn about internship opportunities at Alaska Native organizations and create a professional resume.

The CIRI C3 Experience also engages the participants in Alaska Native culture. From Elder storytellers to Alaska Native games and dances, the camp celebrates the rich cultures and diversity of Alaska’s Native people.

The camp is open to CIRI shareholders and confirmed descendants ages 15 to 19. The deadline to apply is March 15, with the camp scheduled for Aug. 13-15. All transportation (including airfare, if required), housing and meal costs will be covered by CIRI.

Job and Resource Fair

With the opportunity to connect with CIRI, its affiliated entities, other Alaska Native corporations and private employers in the Cook Inlet region, CIRI’s annual Job and Resource Fair provides shareholders and confirmed descendants the chance to learn about potential employment and training opportunities. Attendees are given access to computers where they can work on and print their resumes, with Cook Inlet Tribal Council representatives on hand to answer questions and offer resume advice. A clothing drive is held in conjunction with the fair, with a variety of gently-used professional attire and accessories for attendees to choose from for interviews.

The 2018 Job and Resource Fair will be held this spring. Details will be made available in future issues of the Raven’s Circle and via CIRI’s social media channels.

Summer Internship Program

A program that creates opportunities for students and recent graduates to directly apply their education in a practical work setting, CIRI’s summer internship program allows shareholders and descendants to gain insight into CIRI’s culture and businesses. Since the program began in 2015, CIRI has placed 17 interns – five of whom are still employed with CIRI and subsidiary companies.

Applications are accepted year-round and are due no later than the second Friday of May for the current-year program. To be eligible for consideration, students must be a CIRI shareholder or a confirmed descendant with a GPA of 2.0 or higher, and either: 1) recently graduated from a four-year degree program; 2) enrolled in a four-year degree program with at least junior standing; or 3) enrolled in or recently graduated from a relevant vocational program.

In 2018, if CIRI cannot find an opportunity for an approved applicant, we will work to place him/her in a position outside of CIRI while still encouraging his/her participation in CIRI’s program enrichment activities, including cultural education, volunteer programs and

A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sophie Minich, CIRI President and Chief Executive Officer

Happy New Year! As we welcome 2018, I wish all of our readers many blessings, health and prosperity.

The New Year is when we strategize our path for the next 365 days and focus on the future. Here at CIRI, that means not only determining how to best deliver strong, consistent and sustainable dividends to our shareholders, but developing new and exciting opportunities that enable our shareholders and their descendants to advance in their careers and lives.

To be held this spring, the 2018 CIRI Job and Resource Fair will see the development of new efforts to increase shareholder employment, including an opportunity for shareholders to promote their own businesses. In addition, the recently-relaunched AlaskaNativeHire.com provides custom tools to help Alaska Native job seekers land the perfect job.

In 2015, CIRI significantly expanded its summer internship program, which creates opportunities for students and recent graduates to directly apply their education in a practical work setting while gaining excellent experience and insight into CIRI's culture and businesses. I encourage young shareholders and confirmed descendants to find out more at www.ciri.com/internship.

An exciting new youth program, the CIRI C3 Experience will debut this summer. This three-day, two-night camp brings together young CIRI shareholders and descendants to foster leadership skills, help prepare them for college and careers, and deepen their understanding of their Alaska Native heritage. All costs for qualified participants will be covered by CIRI. The inaugural camp will be held Aug. 13-15, and the deadline to apply is March 15. For more information and an application, visit www.ciri.com/C3.

As part of CIRI's dedication to preserving the history, methodologies, skills and traditions ingrained in Alaska Native art, the company supports its shareholder and descendant artists in a variety of ways:

- CIRI's Alaska Native Artist Directory provides an online space for shareholder and descendant artists to connect free of charge with potential customers, including other shareholders and descendants and members of the general public. View the directory or apply to have your information included at www.ciri.com/artistdirectory.
- CIRI provides tables and gives Alaska Native artists the opportunity to sell their handmade crafts in the first-floor lobby of CIRI's Fireweed Business Center from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday. Artists may call (907) 274-8638 to learn more or schedule a table.
- The Alaska State Council on the Arts, in partnership with The CIRI Foundation, developed an Alaska Native Artist Resource Workbook to assist Alaska Native artists in furthering their artistic careers. Download the workbook and view a list of additional artist resources at www.thecirifoundation.org/project-grants/resources-for-artists.
- CIRI's annual Holiday Craft Bazaar gives shareholders and confirmed descendants an opportunity to sell their arts and crafts to the public. The event, which began in 2014, continues to grow each year, with 2017 boasting a record number of vendors and attendees.

A number of youth programs – such as an annual art contest, Take the Next Generation to Work Day, Shareholder Participation Committee youth representative positions, youth voting and educational incentives – encourage young shareholders and descendants to become involved with the corporation, connect with their Alaska Native heritage and excel in school. Visit www.ciri.com/youth for details.

I'm proud of the opportunities we are able to offer to our shareholders and descendants. Along with CIRI's strong dividends, these programs will help to keep shareholders engaged and committed to the future success of our corporation. As always, you can find the most up-to-date program information at ciri.com and via CIRI's social media channels. If you don't already, I encourage you to follow us on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter.

Warm regards,

Sophie Minich

Dale Tran's New Year's Day of Giving

Before he passed away last year, Kaladi Brothers Coffee CFO Dale Tran was working toward his "big, hairy, audacious goal" – turning Kaladi's New Year's Day of Giving into a local tradition for Alaskans.

On Jan. 1 of each year, Kaladi donates 100 percent of all beverage proceeds to a local charity nominated by its staff. Tran passed away unexpectedly at the age of 42, leaving behind a wife and two young daughters. In 2018, Kaladi's Day of Giving was renamed Dale Tran's New Year's Day of Giving in his honor. Over its 27-year history, the event has raised $1 million for various Anchorage nonprofits.

This year CIRI stepped up to support the Day of Giving not only as a sponsor, but with 10 volunteers representing CIRI who manned Kaladi's Brayton Drive location, grinding beans and pouring shots for customers. All told, the event raised $60,000 for the Abused Women's Aid in Crisis (AWAIC) shelter in Anchorage.

"CIRI was happy to support this event in Dale's honor," said Rachel Batres, CIRI's community relations manager. "It's a wonderful example of community coming together to not only support a worthy cause, but to pay tribute to a man whose generosity touched so many." 📧

DONATE THROUGH PICK.CLICK.GIVE. BEGINNING JAN. 1

Click.
Give.

The Alaska Permanent Fund Dividend (PFD) filing period runs Jan. 1-March 31, 2018. A unique giving tradition, Pick.Click.Give. allows Alaskans to share their PFDs with the causes they care about most. Simply select the organization of your choice from a searchable online list, then designate it to receive all or a portion of your PFD. In October, that amount will automatically be deducted from your PFD.

Among the eligible 2018 Pick.Click.Give. organizations are five CIRI-affiliated nonprofits: Alaska Native Heritage Center, Alaska Native Justice Center, The CIRI Foundation, Koahnic Broadcast Corporation/KNBA 90.3 FM and Southcentral Foundation.

Visit www.pickclickgive.org for additional information. To apply for the 2018 PFD and make your Pick.Click.Give. selection(s), visit www.pfd.alaska.gov.

Kristin Helvey

It seems a contradiction, but CIRI descendant Kristin Helvey's (Athabascan and Yu'pik) small-town Alaska upbringing inspired her to see the world.

Growing up in King Salmon, a community of fewer than 500 year-round residents in the Bristol Bay area, "was so much fun," Kristin recalled. "Everyone knew everyone; it was a really tight-knit community. I was lucky in that during that time (the 1980s and 1990s) we had good fishing years, so the borough was really well funded. I was involved in a lot of different activities – softball, volleyball and student government – so it was a great blend of knowing your neighbors and feeling safe and protected and getting to travel and do a lot of different things."

Summers were spent on Kristin's grandparents' cattle ranch in Oklahoma. Her maternal grandmother "was a mover and a shaker, very philanthropic-minded and a leader in her community," Kristin said. "I always knew I would attend college – it was an expectation of my parents – but my grandma was the one who instilled how important it is to do work that matters."

For Kristin, that meant pursuing a journalism and broadcasting degree with an emphasis in public relations (PR) at Oklahoma State University. "I was never one of those kids who knew what they wanted to be when they grew up, but I always had a passion around health and community health, nutrition and exercise," she explained. Her first position after graduating college in 2004 was for a community health center in Oklahoma, followed by six years with Southcentral Foundation (SCF).

A CIRI-affiliated nonprofit, SCF provides a range of health and wellness services for Alaska Native and American Indian people living in southcentral Alaska. Kristin started as a public relations manager in 2006 and, after only a year, was promoted to a director-level position.

"SCF's service unit stretches from the Canadian border to the Aleutian Chain, so the audience is incredibly diverse, both geographically and culturally. A big part of my job was figuring out what's applicable to our audience, fostering relationships, consensus-building and project management. It was the best of all possible worlds – a PR job in the area of health with an emphasis on Alaska Native issues."

In 2010, married and with a baby on the way, Kristin was looking for a job with more flexibility. She started Helvey Communications because she wanted to keep doing work that interested her while maintaining a focus on her family, "but it expanded pretty quickly!"

"There are pros and cons to owning your own business, and I've had a few surprises along the way, but I can honestly say I wouldn't change a thing," Kristin continued. "I'm the owner and principal [of Helvey Communications], but I utilize a network of skilled professionals on an as-needed basis. We're a full-service firm without the overhead, which means I get to work with nonprofits and on smaller projects close to my heart."

Kristin's clients include the Alaska Department of Health and Social Services, the Healthy Native Babies Project (a program of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services), SCF and United Way of Anchorage. She has received numerous awards over the years, including a Silver Anvil Award from the national chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

In addition to running a successful business and a busy home life with a husband and two young sons, Kristin teaches marketing at Alaska Pacific University (she received her master's degree from the school in 2009), and enjoys cooking, travel, health and fitness. She serves on the board of the Public Relations Society of America at both the state and regional level.

"You always hear 'it takes a village,' and we have that mentality here in Alaska," Kristin said. "You see it in rural areas, and you see it in larger cities like Anchorage. Those of us who live here, we're fortunate to have community support and know that we're all looking out for each other." 📧

MAKING LANGUAGE HISTORY

Clare Swan Early Head Start Launches Anchorage's First Early Childhood Yup'ik Immersion Language Class

By Jamey Bradbury, courtesy of Cook Inlet Tribal Council

It's snack time for the toddlers in Grace White and Rose Savok's classroom. As the two Clare Swan Early Head Start teachers help their young students wash their hands, they describe what they're doing to help the children learn language.

The catch? They're speaking Yup'ik.

Cook Inlet Tribal Council's (CITC) Clare Swan Early Head Start, which opened its doors in March 2017, is offering Anchorage's first early childhood Yup'ik immersion classroom, where children as young as 6 months begin to learn Yup'ik, one of Alaska's 11 Native languages. While many rural communities have offered Yup'ik and other Native language immersion classes, this is the first time such a class has been made available in Alaska's largest city.

"In Anchorage, you've got students learning Spanish, Japanese, German, Russian—but there was never an Alaska language taught here," said Isailgaq "Isty" Hlasny, the Yup'ik language coordinator for Clare Swan Early Head Start. "To bring Yup'ik to the Anchorage area, it's not just about education; it also reconnects families with tradition and cultural activities."

This groundbreaking opportunity was made possible through an Esther Martinez Immersion grant awarded by the Administration for Native Americans. CITC partnered with Cook Inlet Native Head Start (CINHS) to bring Native language immersion to 28 children from birth to age 5. Any child enrolled at Clare Swan

CIRI JOINS DOYON IN DRILLING PROJECT

Targeting a promising oil and gas prospect, CIRI will join fellow Alaska Native regional corporation Doyon, Limited (Doyon) in drilling the Totchaket #1 well this summer. The oil and gas exploration well will be located in the Nenana basin west of Fairbanks, Alaska. Its location is based on data acquired from a 64-square-mile 3D seismic program conducted in 2017.

Prior exploratory drilling in the Nenana basin by Doyon – including a 2016 exploration well in which CIRI participated – has demonstrated the presence of an active hydrocarbon system that produces both natural gas and oil, although no commercial quantities have yet been found.

"The presence of direct hydrocarbon indicators in the 2017 seismic data represents a significant and new step toward the confirmation of a commercially viable oil or gas discovery by the Totchaket #1 well," said Ethan Schutt, CIRI senior vice president, Land and Energy Development. "We see seismic data anomalies at multiple horizons spanning thousands of feet of sedimentary section that will be intersected by the Totchaket #1 well path."

From a location approximately 20 miles north of the city of Nenana on the east side of the Tanana River, the Totchaket #1 well will be drilled to a depth of approximately 12,500 feet. Previous wells have been drilled west of the Tanana River and farther south. In a discovery scenario, the Totchaket #1 well and pad will be on the same side of the Tanana River as the Alaska Railroad, the Parks Highway and other public infrastructure, expediting development and reducing its cost.

"CIRI values its continued partnership with Doyon," said CIRI President and CEO Sophie Minich. "We believe our continued investment at Nenana offers the potential for a basin-opening oil and gas discovery in Alaska." 📧 mentoring activities. For interns coming from outside of Anchorage, a small stipend may be offered to help offset travel and housing expenses.

Take the Next Generation to Work Day

Dedicated to helping young shareholders and confirmed descendants explore future career paths, Take the Next Generation to Work Day encourages youth ages 10 through high school to reach their full potential by providing an opportunity to learn about CIRI and experience what's involved in and required for jobs they may be interested in. Each January, participants spend a day at the Fireweed Business Center, CIRI's corporate headquarters in Anchorage, where they hear from CIRI executives and spend time with an employee sponsor to learn about areas of the company that align with their interests. To round out the experience, participants engage in hands-on cultural activities. Applications are accepted year-round and are due on the first Friday in January for the current-year program.

Youth Representatives

Based on discussions with the Shareholder Participation Committee (SPC) members, CIRI added

three youth representatives to the SPC committees. Youth representatives have the opportunity to meet directors, executive and management staff from CIRI and CIRI-affiliated nonprofit organizations, and to hear about CIRI initiatives and business developments and the many programs and services offered by the CIRI nonprofits. In turn, the addition of youth representatives allows CIRI to learn more about what is important to the next generation of CIRI shareholders.

Youth who are interested in serving as an SPC youth representative must either be a CIRI shareholder or confirmed descendant, 13 to 17 years of age, and must submit (a) an application, (b) a letter of introduction, (c) a reference letter and (d) a short essay explaining why they want to serve as a youth representative and what they know about CIRI and their Alaska Native heritage. Application packets are accepted year-round, and must be received no later than the second Wednesday of August to receive consideration for the current-year program.

For more information about these and other programs and resources, visit www.ciri.com/shareholders.

may participate in the Yup'ik immersion class, which offers eight slots; meanwhile, CINHS holds classes for children ages 3 to 5. With the Anchorage School District having just been awarded a federal language grant for teaching Yup'ik, said Isty, children will have the opportunity to keep learning and speaking Yup'ik well beyond their head-start years.

"It's the opposite of our history, when we lost our languages because our people were sent to English-speaking schools," she points out. "Hearing from Elders who had to get education outside their villages, in schools where speaking their Native language was forbidden—we've lost so many of our languages, others are dying off. But Yup'ik is still strong, and we want to keep it that way. So to have this, it's very important."

In Grace and Rose's classroom, children learn through all the usual activities toddlers do in head start: play with toys, learn to pick up after themselves, eat snacks, go outside. But the whole time, the teachers, both of whom are fluent in Yup'ik, speak to the children in Yup'ik only.

Research supports starting a second language early on, since young children are better at mimicking new sounds and adopting proper pronunciation than older learners. Early second language acquisition is also beneficial for little ones: studies have shown that it improves critical thinking skills, creativity and mental flexibility.

And when it comes to learning Yup'ik, the benefits go beyond the classroom.

"We want our daughter to know every culture she comes from," said Arlene Alexie, whose daughter Melaena is enrolled in the immersion class. In November, Arlene and her family attended their first Yugtun Night, a monthly activity for families of students in the Clare Swan Yup'ik immersion class that allows parents to learn along with their children.

At this session, Isty demonstrated her own family's method of making agutuk (Eskimo ice cream) as Arlene's daughter watched with interest. Each gathering includes some kind of cultural activity, in addition to language practice. At a future Yugtun Night, Isty has plans to show parents how to make drums and to learn Yup'ik dancing.

"I only know the basics of Yup'ik," Arlene continued. "I'm excited to learn more along with Melaena. It's good for her to have this connection to her culture."

Teachers of the Yup'ik immersion class also depend upon families to provide the Native names of the participating children, which sometimes requires tracing backward through grandparents or aunts. In class, children are referred to by their Native names.

"Families are so glad for the opportunity for their kids to be taught Yup'ik," Isty said. "It's been a very positive response, and I've gotten a lot of interest in the class."

Any child enrolled at Clare Swan Early Head Start is eligible to enroll in the Yup'ik immersion class, which allows for up to eight children. Classes are held 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, year-round. For more information, contact Nicole Hunter at nhunter@citci.org.

A NOTE TO SHAREHOLDERS REGARDING THE CIRI CALENDAR

As you may have noticed, CIRI did not produce a 2018 calendar. The cost for producing, printing and mailing the calendar is significant and increases each year. Therefore, after receiving feedback from the Shareholder Participation Committees, as well as from shareholders at various Information Meetings, CIRI opted not to publish a 2018 calendar. Based on both costs and feedback from shareholders, CIRI is prepared to reevaluate the decision in the coming year.

To keep shareholders and descendants informed of important CIRI dates, such as CIRI events, dividend payment dates and deadlines for upcoming opportunities, we have added sections to our website, at www.ciri.com/shareholders, and in the Qenek shareholder portal.

FAREWELL SHEEP HUNTING PERMITS

About 200 miles west of Anchorage, near Farewell, lie two townships of mountainous CIRI property. As in previous years, recreational use permits will be issued for access to portions of the Farewell area for Dall sheep hunting in 2018.

Access permits to CIRI lands near Farewell are awarded through a random drawing. The general public may apply for access; however, CIRI shareholders and their immediate family members, confirmed descendants and CIRI employees are drawn in a separate priority lottery, ensuring first choice of hunting periods. There is no charge to apply, and permits are issued free of charge.

Additionally, CIRI is pleased to again make access permits available by lottery for the Unit 19 Youth Hunt, to be held Aug. 1-5, 2018. Though available through the same lottery system as the general hunt, permits are limited to CIRI shareholders, confirmed descendants and children of CIRI employees.

As in past years, hunters will access the area via Veleska Lake to the north and Smith Lake to the south. For conservation purposes, access permits will be issued for up to 10 days, nine nights, and each hunting party (up to four individuals) will be limited to taking two legal rams. All state hunting regulations apply.

For additional details and to complete the online permit application, visit www.ciri.com/our-lands/permitting. To register as a CIRI descendant, visit www.ciri.com/descendant-registration.

NEW EPISODE OF CIRIOSITY NOW AVAILABLE

Download the newest episode of CIRIosity, the CIRI podcast, "Reforming Criminal Justice in Alaska." Alaska is facing a crime problem — on the streets and in the halls of justice. As budgets shrink, the state's ability to deal with rising crime rates and an opioid epidemic is being tested. Meanwhile, the Alaska Criminal Justice Commission tackled the task of reviewing whether effective alternatives to mass incarceration could work in Alaska. CIRI shareholder and vice president Greg Razo had the job of leading the commission and ushering its recommendations through the Alaska Legislature. In this episode, he talks about the accomplishments and frustrations.
