OUTSTANDING YEAR FOR CIRI SUBSIDIARY NORTH WIND GROUP

2019 proved to be another exceptional year for CIRI subsidiary North Wind Group (NWG), with record-breaking financials, a new office location, prestigious safety awards and recognition in top industry publications.

“The North Wind team achieved tremendous success in 2019,” said NWG President and CEO Chris Leichtweis. “Thanks to the dedication and overall performance of our team, over the last three-and-a-half years we have taken on exciting and important contracts in the federal environmental services market and doubled our company’s revenue.”

A few highlights include:

New Office Location

NWG kicked off 2019 with the opening of a new office in Guam. The event was commemorated Feb. 7 with an open house and partner outreach, which included a traditional Chamorro blessing ceremony. With staff and offices in Alaska, Hawaii and now Guam, North Wind is committed to working in the Pacific Rim and will continue to build and strengthen long-term relationships with subcontractors, vendors and teaming partners in the area.

Project Performance and Safety Milestones

- NWG participated in the reopening of the USS Arizona Memorial, part of the Pearl Harbor National Memorial in Honolulu, Hawaii. The Battleship USS Arizona was bombed Dec. 7, 1941, killing 1,177 sailors and Marines. More than 900 bodies could not be recovered and remain onboard. Today, the Arizona rests where she fell, submerged in about 40 feet of water just off the coast of Ford Island. A memorial was built in 1962 atop the sunken ship, memorializing the crew, service members and civilians killed in the attack. NWG completed a major repair to the USS Arizona Memorial, installing a new anchoring system using giant screws and helical pilings, some longer than 100 feet. The pilings were driven into the sea floor and attached with synthetic ropes to the dock. The job was completed safely and ahead of schedule.

- The Portsmouth Mission Alliance, a North Wind Solutions majority-owned joint venture, serves as the infrastructure support services contractor for the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) Portsmouth/Paducah Project Office at the Portsmouth Gaseous Diffusion Plant in Piketon, Ohio. In April, the Alliance was recognized by the Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation for safety excellence; three months later, it surpassed 1 million safe work hours without a lost workday case or recordable injury. In August, the Alliance was awarded a DOE Voluntary Protection Program “Star of Excellence” award. Award recipients must maintain efforts and statistics for an injury rate 75% below industry average and demonstrate safety excellence through community outreach and mentoring efforts.
- As part of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Formerly Utilized Sites Remedial Action Program, North Wind/Portage provides environmental service activities—including cleanup of soils and debris contaminated with beryllium, lead and radiological waste—near the community of Luckey, Ohio, 22 miles southeast of Toledo. As of June 26, approximately 47,800 tons of waste had been safely transported 197,500 cumulative

Q&A WITH NWG PRESIDENT AND CEO CHRIS LEICHTWEIS

Christopher (Chris) Leichtweis serves as president and CEO of the North Wind Group (NWG). Since coming on board in 2013, Leichtweis and his team have grown the North Wind group of companies into small-business leaders in the environmental, engineering, construction and technical-consulting industries.

In 1991, Chris founded Safety and Ecology Holding Corporation (SEC), serving as its president for more than 20 years. From 2008 to 2011, Chris served as president and director of SEC's parent (public) company, Homeland Security Capital Corporation, growing the parent's portfolio of three companies by 43% and expanding operations into many new commercial and federal markets. Prior to founding SEC, Chris served in various engineering and management positions at Bechtel National and Bechtel Environmental Inc.

Chris received his bachelor's degree in physics from the State University of New York Brockport and a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Tennessee. He also holds a Certified Industrial Hygienist designation from the American Board of Industrial Hygiene. In 2005, Chris was nationally recognized with the Southeast United States Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year award.

We sat down to talk with Chris about his role at NWG and what he sees for the company's future.

What is your role at NWG? Your high-level responsibilities, and also a bit of what your day-to-day looks like?

As CEO and president of North Wind Group, I am responsible for overseeing the overall strategy of the company. I focus on vision, risk management, growth and our fiduciary responsibilities, and I pride myself on being a hands-on, operational leader. I set targets and monitor the company through metrics.

I typically start my day with a brisk walk. I split my time between Idaho Falls, Idaho, and Tennessee, so depending on the season, I prefer to walk outside. My days are filled with lots of meetings, preferably in person or via video conferencing.

What milestones has NWG achieved since you came on as president and CEO in 2013?

Our team has achieved tremendous success, and

A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sophie Minich, CIRI President and Chief Executive Officer

Happy New Year! I hope you enjoyed a relaxing holiday and are ready to embrace this time of new beginning and fresh starts.

As we reflect on 2019, I am grateful for the strength of CIRI's business operations and our success as a company. A few highlights include:

CINGSA Ownership Increase

Cook Inlet Natural Gas Storage Alaska (CINGSA) is an underground gas storage facility located on Alaska's Kenai Peninsula that is capable of storing up to 11 billion cubic feet of natural gas. By substantially improving the reliability and delivery of natural gas supplies during the winter months, the facility provides a critical service to residents and communities throughout the Cook Inlet region. In January 2019, CIRI doubled its percentage interest in CINGSA from 4.25% to 8.5%.

CIRI Settlement Trust

At the Annual Meeting of Shareholders held June 1, 2019, shareholders overwhelmingly approved the formation of the CIRI Settlement Trust (CST). Benefits to both shareholders and the corporation include:

- Under present law, distributions by the CST are not anticipated to be taxable to beneficiaries.
- CIRI Elders' Settlement Trust funding ran out before year's end 2019. The CIRI Board of Directors approved the necessary funding to cover the shortfall and ensure all eligible Elders received full payments through the end of the year. Beginning in 2020, Elders' benefits will be provided through the CST, maintaining the current level of payments and eligibility requirements of the CIRI Elders' Settlement Trust.
- Significantly reduces CIRI's current and future federal income tax liability. This means the company will have more money to fund benefits for shareholders and descendants and to reinvest and continue to grow the company.

Johnson Tract Mineral Deposit

In May, CIRI entered into a lease agreement with Canada-based Constantine Metal Resources Ltd.

The lease authorizes exploration of a gold- and zinc-rich deposit, known as the Johnson Tract, in a private inholding within Lake Clark National Park and Preserve. The property was conveyed to CIRI under the terms of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971 and the Cook Inlet Land Exchange of 1976. The two companies signed a 10-year lease with a renewal option, which includes annual and escalating lease payments to CIRI until production is achieved. Upon completion of a feasibility study and a decision to proceed with the project, CIRI has the option of investing in the project as a partner and receiving net smelter return royalties on gold and base metals.

Maple Springs of Anchorage

For many years, Alaska's senior housing market has struggled to meet the needs of its older residents. Maple Springs of Anchorage, an assisted living and memory care facility, is being built on CIRI-owned land in South Anchorage. Preliminary civil work began in October and construction is expected to begin this summer, with substantial completion in early 2021.

North Wind Group

Based in Idaho Falls, Idaho, CIRI subsidiary North Wind Group (NWG) is a leading small business in the federal environmental services market. At the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Oak Ridge, Tenn., NWG subsidiary North Wind Solutions (NWSol) is responsible for round-the-clock waste operations support at the lab's Transuranic Waste Processing Center, dealing with radioactive elements like plutonium and americium. NWSol was awarded a two-year contract extension in February so it may complete its transuranic waste processing mission. NWG also opened a new office in Guam, allowing it to further build and strengthen relationships with subcontractors, vendors and teaming partners in the Pacific Rim.

Youth Programs

As part of its commitment to engage and support the next generation of shareholders, CIRI revamped and expanded several of its programs, including the CIRI C3 Experience, Next Gen Day (formerly Take the Next Generation to Work Day) and the summer internship program.

Other

Change is a constant factor in our lives. While CIRI was fortunate to experience many successes in 2019, the year also brought its share of challenges that were largely outside the company's control. CIRI abides by a philosophy of engaging with challenges and learning from them, which—given the company's willingness to evolve, and thanks to the expertise of our people and partners—often leads to exciting new opportunities.

- The longest U.S. government shutdown in history occurred Dec. 22, 2018, to Jan. 25, 2019. During this period, approximately 800,000 federal employees lived without pay and tens of thousands of contractors were out of work as well. The impacts of the shutdown uniquely affected Tribal citizens, particularly with constraints on the U.S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs and the U.S. Department Health and Human Services' Indian Health Service.
- While the U.S. experiences a record-breaking streak of job creation and low unemployment rates, the

BOARD CORNER

A Message from CIRI Board Chair Emeritus Roy Huhndorf

My name is Roy Huhndorf and I have served on the CIRI Board of Directors from 1972 to 1998 and from 2002 to the present. I was born and raised in Nulato, a rural interior Alaska village. My family moved to Anchorage in the mid-1950s so my siblings and I could attend school.

Today, I live in Ninilchik, an Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA)-designated village in the Cook Inlet region. My wife Charlene and I have two daughters and four grandchildren.

ANCSA passed in 1971, and I was honored to serve as CIRI's president and CEO from 1975 to 1995. During this time—through rounds of negotiations with the state and federal governments, leading to the 1976 Cook Inlet Land Exchange and the finalization of land selections for Cook Inlet village corporations—CIRI leaders consistently sought fair settlement on behalf of the people of its region.

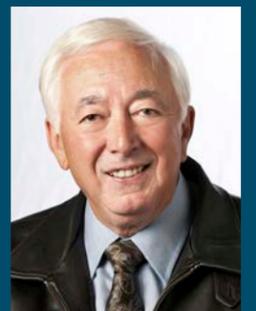

While a significant percentage of CIRI's original shareholders were of Dena'ina and Ahtna Athabascan descent, CIRI is the corporation of Alaska's urban center, where many Alaska Native people relocated from other regions and subsequently enrolled with the corporation. Presently, approximately 40% of our shareholders live outside Alaska.

CIRI is known as the "melting pot" of Alaska Native regional corporations, and virtually every Alaska Native group is featured among our more than 9,100 shareholders—Aleut/Unangax, Alutiiq/Sugpiaq, Athabascan, Haida, Inupiat, Tlingit, Tsimshian and Yup'ik. The diversity of CIRI's shareholders is a key to the company's success, as each of us brings to the table a unique combination of ideas, personal history and worldview.

In the early 1970s, several Alaska Native leaders told me that CIRI would probably be the first Alaska Native corporation to fail because we didn't have a single cultural identity, but it certainly didn't turn out that way. In fact, CIRI has distributed more than $1.1 billion to shareholders since its inception—more than any other Alaska Native regional corporation.

CIRI has never thought of itself as a single culture; we are Alaska Native people and strive to celebrate everyone's culture in the Alaska Indigenous family. At the same time, we stand in solidarity as Alaska Native people. At the end of the day, our differences allow us to consider different viewpoints, and our sense of community makes us stronger. This is the primary reason CIRI has become the success it is today. 🏡 miles to a disposal facility. The project has also treated or disposed of almost 3 million gallons of wastewater and completed a major milestone of backfilling in the lagoon area. As of November, the project team had worked 1,580 safe workdays and put in 290,000 hours without a lost-time incident.

- NWG was recognized during a community celebration in Moab, Utah, for its cleanup efforts at the Moab Uranium Mill Tailings Remedial Action project site. To date, the project has cleaned and transported more than 10 million tons of mill tailings to a site 30 miles away. The DOE Office of Environmental Management thanked the team and state and local government partners for their continued dedication to the project. An estimated 6 million tons of material remain at the project site. Cleanup continues at an accelerated pace, and since February 2019, the project has doubled its weekly disposal shipments.

2019 Awards and Recognition

- In 2018, North Wind Inc. completed a hazardous residential cleanup project near Klamath Falls, Ore. In 2019, the project received the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Region 10 Howard Orlean Excellence in Site Reuse Award, which is given to stakeholders who demonstrate dedication to safely and productively reusing contaminated areas while keeping them protected for both the public and the environment.
- For its work at the Transuranic Waste Processing Center project in Oak Ridge, Tenn., NWG received the DOE's Voluntary Protection Program "Star of Excellence" award. Contractors whose programs meet the requirements for outstanding safety and health programs receive STAR recognition, the highest achievement level.
- For demonstrating excellence in safety and health systems that protect employees and promote superior corporate citizenship, Alaska-based Silver Mountain Construction, a North Wind company, received the Alaska Governor's Safety Award of Excellence.

For demonstrating excellence in health and safety, Silver Mountain Construction received the Alaska Governor's Safety Award of Excellence.

- NWG moved up 10 spots to No. 45 on the Engineering News-Record (ENR) "Top 200 Environmental Firms" list. ENR annually ranks the top environmental services firms based on the percentage of gross revenue for environmental services.
- NWG was ranked No. 2 in the Book of Lists in the Knoxville-Area Environmental Engineering and Consulting Firms category and No. 26 in Idaho's Top 100 privately owned businesses.

Corporate Citizenship

- NWG was pleased to sponsor the 14th Annual Boise St. Jude Dream Home Giveaway, during which more than $1.1 million was raised for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.
- NWG awarded the 18th Annual Tom Sherwood Memorial Scholarship to Idaho State University student Heather Phillips. Since 2001, the Thomas Sherwood Memorial Endowment has provided nearly $40,000 in scholarships to Idaho State University students majoring in biology and geology.
- North Wind/Portage joined the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant Nuclear Waste Partnership and several local oil companies to participate in the first annual fundraiser for the Desert Willow Wildlife Rehabilitation Center in Carlsbad, N.M.
- In April, NWG employees participated in an Earth Day event at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., which included trash pickup and constructing a pollinator garden.

North Wind has repeatedly been recognized as a top-performing company. In 2016, we received the Silver Business Achievement Award from the "Environmental Business Journal." "Engineering News Record" and "Inc." magazine have both included North Wind multiple times as a top environmental firm in their annual listings of the nation's top companies. NWG has also received the Merrill C. Smith Award recognizing the company's service to veterans; the Better Business Bureau Torch Award for the company's commitment to ethical business practices and support for the community; the Small Business Administration's Subcontractor of the Year Award and Administrators Award of Excellence; and the Department of Energy's Protégé of the Year Award.

What is your favorite part of working at NWG? What are some of the challenges?

My favorite part is that the people I work with are the very best; I learned long ago to surround yourself with the very best talent. The biggest challenge is optimizing project-management systems and processes.

One of CIRI's corporate values is Respect: "Embrace the history and heritage of CIRI—its land, resources and people." How does this inform the work NWG bids on and performs?

Our projects solve problems, offer innovative solutions, clean up the environment, repair infrastructure issues and make the world a better place for all of Earth's inhabitants, including current and future generations of CIRI shareholders.

What are some growth areas for NWG? What does the company's five-year plan look like?

We plan to maintain the four business sectors of facility infrastructure, environmental, construction and technical services. We expect to see growth in the management and operations of laboratory services, and plan to expand our environmental remediation and construction sectors, specifically focusing on growth in the Indo-Pacific region. Our plan centers on continuing current operations in a safe and profitable way within our core competencies.

CIRI Holiday Craft Bazaar

At 8:29 a.m. on Nov. 30, 2018, a magnitude 7.0 earthquake struck Southcentral Alaska. CIRI was forced to cancel the fifth annual Holiday Craft Bazaar, scheduled for Dec. 1, as work and safety crews were busy assessing damage and cleaning up broken glass and other debris after the quake.

Fast-forward a year later, with nearly 60 Alaska Native artists selling an array of one-of-a-kind handmade items Saturday, Dec. 7 in the lobby of the Fireweed Business Center.

"We were devastated when we had to cancel last year's event," said original CIRI shareholder and employee Carolyn Bickley, who created and manages the CIRI Holiday Craft Bazaar. "I wondered how the cancellation would affect this year's event, but we had record artist turnout; I was adding vendors to the waitlist as early as August."

Tables were reserved on a first-come, first-served basis, with preference given to CIRI shareholders and descendants. The event was open to the public.

"I really see the craft bazaar as an opportunity for shareholders and descendants to meet each other, display their art and hopefully earn an additional income in time for the holidays," Bickley added.

A silent auction was held in conjunction with the event, with 100% of the $4,550 in proceeds benefitting Cook Inlet Tribal Council's Christmas basket program.

SHAREHOLDERSPOTLIGHT

Clinton Ray Lageson

Though CIRI shareholder Clinton Ray Lageson (Kahtnuht'ana Dena'ina Athabascan) spends much of his time collaborating with and advocating for Alaska Native and American Indian (AN/Al) people across the U.S., his heart is at home with his Tribe and his family.

Clinton is connected with CIRI through his mother, original enrollee Doris Jean Lageson. His maternal grandparents are the late Eli Darien Sr. and Marie Alex Darien Moon of Kenai, Alaska. His father, Allan Lageson Sr., is of Norwegian descent. Clinton lived in Anchorage until he was 13, at which time his family moved back to Kenai.

Kenai is a predominately white community, with AN/Al residents composing less than 10% of the total population. As a young person, "my Alaska Native culture, especially growing up around my grandmother, was really strong," Clinton recalled. "But during my school years, it began to feel like something I shouldn't be proud of. It took leaving Kenai and Alaska to realize that my culture is the most important part of my life."

Upon graduating high school in 2002, Clinton and his wife—who was expecting the couple's first child—relocated to Niagara Falls, N.Y. He studied business administration at Niagara County

Anchorage and Alaska economies continue to struggle. When the fiscal year 2020 state budget was announced, it included $444 million in cuts to education, health care, public safety and public assistance, including significant reductions in the University of Alaska budget. Lawmakers attempted to override the university cut and other line-item vetoes but fell short of the three-quarters majority needed to do so. Ultimately, the governor vetoed more than $200 million from the budget in August, including more than $50 million from Medicaid services.

- Alaska faced an extremely active wildland fire season. July was the hottest month in recorded history in Anchorage and the rest of Southcentral Alaska, with very little rainfall. Throughout much of August, Anchorage's air quality index ranged from "Moderate" to "Unhealthy," with the Kenai Peninsula frequently reaching "Hazardous" levels. As of the end of August, 682 fires had burned more than 2.5 million acres across the state.

In business and in life, challenging experiences can be turned into learning experiences, teaching us patience, perspective, ingenuity and resilience. The more we can test our limits and capabilities, the more we can learn about ourselves. The important thing is to treat challenges as opportunities.

Here's to a bright New Year, the things yet to come and the memories we hold dear. May you be blessed with prosperity, good health and happiness in 2020 and beyond.

Warm regards,

CIRI BOARD MEMBER CONFERRED HONORARY DEGREE

Congratulations to CIRI Board Vice Chair Margaret "Margie" L. Brown (Yup'ik), who received a fall 2019 honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from the University of Alaska Anchorage. Recipients are chosen for their significant and lasting contribution to the university, the state of Alaska and/or their discipline or profession. Brown was honored at a commencement ceremony Dec. 15 in Anchorage.

Brown began her career with CIRI in 1976 as an assistant land planner and held numerous positions with the company, including serving as president and CEO from 2005 to 2013. She is a former member of the boards of Alaska Communications Group Inc. and Alaska Communications Systems Holding Inc. and served as chair of the Student Conservation Association Board of Directors. She has also served as vice chair of the National Museum of the American Indian Board of Trustees and currently serves as a member of the Alaska Airlines Advisory Board. Brown served on the CIRI Board from 1984-1987 and 2002-2005. She was elected Director for a fourth time in 2019.

In the mid-1970s, Brown helped implement the Cook Inlet Land Exchange, considered to be one of the largest land-exchange deals in U.S. history. As CIRI's president and CEO, she was responsible for developing and implementing the company's corporate strategies, as well as overseeing business operations and serving as the primary contact for the company's many stakeholders. Brown's interest in renewable energy led CIRI to greatly expand its renewable energy footprint throughout the U.S., including constructing the Fire Island Wind Project in Alaska.

Brown holds a bachelor's degree in biology from the University of Oregon and a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Colorado. She is a YWCA Women of Achievement recipient (1992), an Alaska Business Hall of Fame laureate (2009), winner of United Way's Tocqueville Community Service Award (2011), and recipient of the Anchorage Athena Society's Leadership award (2012) and the Alaska Journal of Commerce's Business Leader of the Year award (2013).

Community College, earned his journeyman ironworker license and attended pipe-welding school. The family returned to Kenai in 2011.

Federally recognized as a sovereign, independent nation in 1971, today Kenaitze Indian Tribe (KIT/the Tribe) has approximately 1,680 tribal members who live primarily on the Kenai Peninsula. KIT's programs and services include health care, tribal justice, early childhood education, an Elders' center and social-service programs. Clinton's mother had served as a Tribal Council member, but it was only after working in Southwest Alaska that Clinton decided to get involved himself.

"I was working a construction job out in Tununak and I witnessed a lot of disparities among the Native people – losing subsistence rights and their culture and language," Clinton recalled. "At that point, I decided to throw my name in the hat for KIT's designated housing authority. I was appointed to the housing board, and two years after that, I ran for Council."

Clinton has served on KIT's Tribal Council as its treasurer since 2015. He was re-elected for a third two-year term in October 2019.

"I think the treasurer position is one of the most important roles if it's done strategically and is in line with the objectives of your people," Clinton explained. "When you're applying for grants or other funding and you've identified sovereignty rights, culture, identity and subsistence as your overarching objectives, and everyone from the executive director on down is on the same page, whether you're in the same room or scattered across the U.S., you're always working toward that collective vision."

In 2017, Clinton was elected Alaska Area vice president alternate for the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI). A nonprofit organization founded in 1944, NCAI seeks to be the unified voice of tribal nations. It is the oldest, largest and most representative American Indian and Alaska Native organization serving the broad interests of tribal governments and communities. Its membership is comprised of AN/AI tribal governments, tribal citizens, individuals, and Native and non-Native organizations.

"During my time as alternate, I really placed importance on understanding the organization and what collaboration meant," Clinton said. "At my first board meeting, I put out that to learn the needs of other tribes in Alaska and across the U.S., I would work for them in Washington, D.C., when I was there. I just wanted to collaborate with tribes and really get to know their issues, and the only way I'd get to do that was by understanding their needs and really advocating for them."

Upon his election as alternate, Clinton discussed with the KIT Tribal Council, his Elders, and NCAI Alaska Area board and committee members Jerry Isaak and Mike Williams Sr. the possibility of securing the NCAI treasurer position in two years' time.

"I knew I wanted to work into the treasurer position, but I wanted to do it respectfully," Clinton said. "I didn't want to do it through politics and the Western thought process; I wanted to be transparent and respectful of the current treasurer. I didn't want to seem like the young, arrogant one coming in at the last minute to put my name in the hat, so I started talking about it right away."

In October 2019, Clinton achieved his goal of being elected NCAI treasurer. "For me, it's about collaborating with tribes and truly, in an honest way, putting myself out there, living my traditional values and working at unifying our people across the country," Clinton said. "There are times we get divided. If we focus on our common bonds—education, health care, land, language, sovereignty, subsistence and tradition—we would have an easier time collaborating."

Clinton is grateful to KIT, and especially his family, for their support. "When I'm going through things, I'm talking to my Tribal Council and they're able to really direct me in a positive direction, along with my Elder advisors," he said. "There are a lot of people who have supported me in a positive way; David Harrison (tribal relations specialist for Southcentral Foundation) has been a huge support. My wife Jessica also takes on a lot so I'm able to do what I do."

"Culture and family are my safe places; it feels like that's where I get my self-care," Clinton continued. "When I won the NCAI election, it was a real positive thing, but all I could think about was returning home and cooking up some moose backstrap and rice and celebrating with my family at home."

CIHA CELEBRATES CH'ANIKNA COMMONS GRAND OPENING

Cook Inlet Housing Authority (CIHA) held a grand opening celebration for its newest family housing development, Ch'anikna Commons, on Sept. 24, 2019. The development features 21 townhouse-style apartments and is located in the heart of Anchorage's Mountain View neighborhood, which holds the distinction of being the most diverse census tract in the entire U.S. Ch'anikna Commons represents CIHA's most recent revitalization effort in this northeast Anchorage neighborhood.

Ch'anikna (pronounced cha-NEEK-nuh) is the Dena'ina Athabascan word for "my children." Ch'anikna Commons will be home to many children and their families in the coming years.

The development encompassed a complete renovation of two structures formerly known as the Marina Karina apartments. Along with aesthetic upgrades, the renovations provide for greater energy efficiency and safety.

Residents will enjoy onsite landscaped courtyards and easy access to William B. Lyons Park and the Mountain View Community Center, home to the Mountain View Boys and Girls Club. The Mountain View Boys and Girls Club plays a critical role in supporting the working families in the neighborhood by providing safe, constructive afterschool and weekend programming for children.

Partners with CIHA in the redevelopment effort included Alaska Housing Finance Corp., Anchorage Community Land Trust, Federal Home Loan Bank Des Moines, Mountain View Boys and Girls Club, Mountain View Community Council, Municipality of Anchorage, Northrim Bank, R4 Capital, Rasmuson Foundation, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and Wells Fargo.

"This block-long revitalization work is the result of the tremendous vision and collaboration among all our partners," said original CIRI shareholder and CIHA CEO Carol Gore. "It includes renovations and upgrades to the Mountain View Community Center and the adjacent William B. Lyons Park. When we come together like this to support and stabilize families, the neighborhood of Mountain View and the community of Anchorage also benefit."

2019 CIRI SHAREHOLDER TAX INFORMATION

IRS 1099 forms for the 2019 tax year will be mailed to shareholders on Jan. 31, 2020. Please note that you may receive more than one type of Form 1099 depending on the type of income received from CIRI.

In addition to receiving paper copies by mail, shareholders with Qenek portal accounts were able to view and print their 1099s before the forms were mailed. Tax information remains accessible in Qenek for six years, allowing shareholders to quickly and easily reprint their forms, if desired. To create a Qenek account and become eligible for quarterly prize drawings, visit the CIRI website and click the Qenek link, or type <https://Qenek.ciri.com> into your browser.

CIRI's IRS Forms 1099 reflect all 2019 payments, including:

- Quarterly dividends (reported in Boxes 1a and 1b on Form 1099-DIV)
- CIRI Elders' Settlement Trust distributions (reported in Boxes 1a and 1b on Form 1099-DIV)
- 7(j) resource payments (reported in Box 3 on Form 1099-MISC)
- Shareholder prizes (reported in Box 3 on Form 1099-MISC)

In 2019, CIRI paid $18.06 per share (or $1,806 per 100 shares) in quarterly dividends (first and second quarter), which were reported on a 1099-DIV in both Box 1a - Ordinary Dividends, and Box 1b - Qualified Dividends. Distributions received in 2019 from the CIRI Settlement Trust (CST) for the third and fourth quarter are considered nontaxable and are not reported on a 1099-DIV. The CST paid $19.54 per share (or $1,954 per 100 shares) in quarterly nontaxable distributions in 2019. Distributions received in 2019 from the Elders' Benefit Program are also reported by CIRI on a Form 1099-DIV in both Box 1a and Box 1b. The Box 1a amount is the total of all taxable distributions CIRI paid for dividends and Elders' Benefit Program distributions. Box 1b shows the same amount and may qualify for a reduced tax rate. If you have held your shares for less than one year, please consult your tax advisor regarding the proper treatment of qualified dividends.

First and Second Quarter dividends and Elders' distributions are reported on Form 1099-DIV.

CIRI Elders' Settlement Trust payments had both a taxable and nontaxable portion, with the taxable portion reported in Boxes 1a and 1b on a 1099-DIV. If you received all four Elders' Trust payments last year, $1,489.24 is reported in Boxes 1a and 1b, and the remaining $310.76 is nontaxable and is not reported on a 1099-DIV.

Shareholders who owned at-large stock received a $19.2334 per share (or $1,923.34 per 100 shares) 7(j) resource revenue payment in 2019. If you are an at-large shareholder, your 7(j) payment is reported on a Form 1099-MISC in Box 3 - Other Income. The resource revenue payment derives from resource sharing among the 12 regional corporations as required by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Your 7(j) payment appears on a different form because resource revenue payments are not dividends and are not considered investment income. ANCSA requires that resource revenue be paid to village shareholders' village corporations, so that CIRI does not report these payments as individual shareholder income. CIRI reports payments made in 2019 to shareholders for prizes or awards on Form 1099-MISC in Box 3 - Other Income.

2020 U.S. CENSUS STAND UP AND BE COUNTED!

The 2020 U.S. census kicked off Jan. 21 in Toksook Bay, Alaska. The census is incredibly important for Native people! The data gathered will provide vital information to leaders in your school, your Tribal and local village governments, and businesses for use in community planning—to provide programs and services for you and your family.

In Alaska villages, paper questionnaires will be used by the census takers. In urban areas of Alaska and in most of the Lower 48 states, households will begin receiving official Census Bureau mail mid-March with detailed information on how to respond to the 2020 Census online, by phone or by mail. For more information, visit alaskacounts.org or census.gov.
