The hits just keep coming.

On the heels of contract wins that include a fitness center addition at Fort Greely, near Fairbanks, Alaska, and a five-year construction project at Offutt Air Force Base (AFB) near Omaha, Neb., Weldin Construction was awarded a five-year Multiple Award Construction Contract (MACC) at McConnell AFB in Wichita, Kan. McConnell AFB is the home of the 22nd Air Refueling Wing, whose primary mission is to provide global air refueling and airlift support. It is the future home of the KC-46A Pegasus, a military version of the Boeing 767. Under the MACC, Weldin will provide design-build construction services for a range of maintenance, repair, alteration and new construction projects at McConnell AFB.

This is the second U.S. Air Force (USAF) MACC awarded to Weldin in the past year, adding to the 2016 contract award at Offutt AFB. “The close proximity of these military bases provides Weldin with significant opportunities for increased financial and operational efficiency,” said Jared Edgar, president of CIRI Services Corp., Weldin’s parent company. “Weldin is proud to bring another contract win to the CIRI family of government contracting companies.”

Weldin participates in the U.S. Small Business Administration’s Historically Underutilized Business Zones (HUBZone) program, which helps small businesses in urban and rural communities gain preferential access to federal procurement opportunities. The program’s benefits for HUBZone-certified companies include competitive and sole-source contracting, subcontracting opportunities and a 10-percent price evaluation preference in full and open contract competitions. The 10-percent preference allows a qualified HUBZone firm to win a competitive procurement even if its bid is up to 10 percent higher than the price offered by an equally qualified larger firm.

After many years of operating solely in Alaska, Weldin became a national federal contractor in 2016 by landing construction contracts in Nebraska, Nevada, Washington and now Kansas. The Palmer, Alaska-based company provides comprehensive construction and construction management services to local, state and federal government agencies, which include heavy civil construction, underground utilities, electrical, concrete, design/build vertical construction, mechanical, HVAC, fire protection, fuel systems and process piping.

A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT
Sophie Minich, CIRI president and chief executive officer

Along with CIRI staff and the CIRI Board of Directors, I look forward to visiting with many of you at CIRI’s Shareholder Information Meetings and the upcoming Annual Meeting of Shareholders.

By the time you’re reading this newsletter, you should have received your copy of CIRI’s 2016 Annual Report. The theme, “Expanding Our Horizons,” speaks to CIRI’s willingness to pursue opportunities outside our region and our state to further benefit shareholders. Featured throughout the report are several CIRI investments, such as the Middletown Energy Center in Ohio, Makai’ena Estates in Hawaii and the Briscoe Wind Farm in Texas. These investments reflect the company’s commitment to seek out the most promising business ventures, wherever they may be.

While CIRI experienced many successes in 2016, our business segments were not immune to the downturn in the state’s economy and impacts due largely to continued low oil and commodity prices. Particularly affected was Cruz Energy Services, a company that specializes in moving oil rigs in North Dakota’s Bakken oilfield. As a result of Cruz Energy’s performance and the current outlook for oil prices, CIRI recorded a goodwill impairment of $21.6 million, which recognizes a reduction in the value of Cruz Energy Services.

In the interim, Cruz Energy has been scaling back staff, cutting costs and looking for opportunities in other geographic markets, while maintaining its capabilities in North Dakota for when the market rebounds.

In spite of these setbacks, CIRI’s operations and investments delivered net income of $91.3 million in 2016 and total assets ended the year at $913 million. Total shareholders’ equity declined to $640 million, and because CIRI’s dividend policy calculates dividends based on 3.5 percent of total shareholders’ equity, shareholders can expect a slight decrease in dividends in 2017 – an estimated $22.4 million (or a total of $35.69 per share) to be paid out in four installments.

For those able to attend, CIRI’s Annual Meeting – to be held June 3 at Southcentral Foundation’s Nuka Learning and Wellness Center in Anchorage – promises to be an entertaining and educational event for our shareholders and their families. Attendees will hear an overview of the company’s financial performance and speeches from candidates for the CIRI Board of Directors, and will also have an opportunity to learn about CIRI’s efforts to engage shareholders and descendants, villages, tribes and other organizations that benefit Alaska Native people. Representatives from the CIRI family of nonprofits will also discuss programs available to shareholders and others residing in the Cook Inlet region.

The Nuka Learning and Wellness Center was chosen for its emphasis on sharing and wellness. The Tribal Drum area is based on a traditional talking circle, which facilitates cooperation, active listening and problem-solving. The building opened last summer and it is the first time CIRI will hold its Annual Meeting in this new space. I hope to see you there!

Warm regards,

Sophie Minich
The Clare Swan Early Head Start Child Care Center opened March 1 and serves children six weeks to 3 years.

Finding child care in Anchorage just became a lot easier for Alaska Native families thanks to Cook Inlet Tribal Council’s (CITC) newest project, the Clare Swan Early Head Start Child Care Center.

“The bottom line is there’s a significant shortage of infant daycare in the community,” said CITC Family Services Manager and CIRI shareholder Connie Wirz. “Here, we’re providing not just child care for the families most in need, but consistent, quality early learning and family support. It’s that important piece: trying to encourage and support families wherever they’re at.”

According to a study released in 2015 by the Economic Policy Institute, a typical Alaska Native family would have to spend a quarter of its total income on child care for an infant and a 4-year-old. And that’s for families who can find care. A separate 2016 study by the State of Alaska found that 43 percent of child care providers had waiting lists, many as long as two or three years. Problems can be compounded for children with disabilities or special needs.

The Clare Swan Early Head Start Child Care Center, which opened March 1, will serve up to 72 children, ages six weeks to 3 months, with nine classrooms, two of which offer 12-hour programs for children whose parents require extended childcare. Any family may apply to this income-eligibility-based Head Start program, with preference given to existing proof of income and Certificate Degree of Indian (TANF) and Child Care Assistance families.

The center is named after Clare Swan, who served on CIRI’s Board of Directors from 1991 to 2005 and was honored with CIRI’s Shareholder of the Year Award in 2013. Swan is CITC’s current board chair and a 2011 inductee into the Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame. In 2009, she was honored as Elder of the Year by the Alaska Federation of Natives. Swan is recognized for her achievements in political activism related to issues that affect Alaska Native people, including subsistence fishing rights and community health.

Thanks to a Language Nest Grant from the Administration for Native Americans, the Clare Swan Early Head Start center will offer three Yup’ik language immersion classes — the first of their kind in Anchorage. A Tribal Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program grant awarded to the center will also equip CITC to provide intensive support to families in the program and in the greater community.

“People think, ‘Oh, it’s a daycare center,’ but it’s really so much more,” Wirz said. “It’s an early learning center. Or really, it’s more a family learning center, because our families are learning, too.”

To apply for the Clare Swan Early Head Start Child Care program, visit www.citci.org. For more information, call CITC Child and Family Services at (907) 793-3132 or email info@citci.org.

Special thanks to CITC’s Jamey Bradbury for contributing to this article.

GUIDE TO THE 2016 ANNUAL REPORT

Understanding CIRI’s financial statements

CIRI recently released its 2016 Annual Report. This document summarizes the company’s performance last year and contains information readers can use to better understand CIRI’s business and investments. Annual report financial statements can be difficult to understand. This guide explains key parts of the financial statements that begin on page 24 of CIRI’s 2016 Annual Report.

The consolidated financial statements include:

- Consolidated Balance Sheets
- Consolidated Statements of Income
- Consolidated Statements of Other Comprehensive Income
- Consolidated Statements of Changes in Shareholders’ Equity
- Consolidated Statements of Cash Flows

The consolidated financial statements are accompanied by footnotes that provide additional details about the company’s financial position, investments and earnings. An independent auditor, KPMG LLP, audited the financial statements and issued an opinion as to CIRI’s conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. Following the financial statements and footnotes is CIRI Management’s Discussion and Analysis, which provides additional information about the company’s operations and holdings.
