Kohl's, Lowe's open at Tikahtnu Commons

Fruitland Fresh open, other small shops opening soon

The development of Tikahtnu Commons continued with the opening of large retail stores Kohl's and Lowe's on April 1. The two national retail chains join Target at the Northeast Anchorage retail and entertainment center being developed by CIRI and partner Browman Development Co., and are some of the many stores and shops that will be opening throughout 2009 and 2010.

"These recent openings, including the new-to-Alaska Kohl's, demonstrate the size and quality of the Tikahtnu Commons development," said Greg Jones, CIRI vice president of real estate. "They also show the importance of Browman's contribution, which is leasing and marketing this center. That's what Browman does best, and it shows."

The Target store (far left) opened on Oct. 9, 2008.

Volcano alert!

Watch for updates on spring shareholder meeting delay or cancellation due to volcano activity

The recent activity of the volcano Mt. Redoubt has been continuous and unpredictable. In the event volcanic activity delays or cancels one of its spring shareholders meetings, CIRI will attempt to contact shareholders who RSVP via telephone and/or an e-mail message. Updates will also be available via the Shareholder Hotline, 1-800-764-CIRI or 263-5191 and select option 5, or online at CIRI's Web site, www.ciri.com.

CIRI Alaska Tourism Corp. names new chief operating officer

Paul Landis 20-year veteran in Alaska tourism

CIRI Alaska Tourism Corp. (CATC) hired Paul Landis as its new chief operating officer on April 13. A long-time Alaskan, Landis previously served as president and chief executive officer at Alaska regional airline Era Aviation Inc. and has more than 20 years of experience in Alaska aviation and tourism.

"Paul brings the right skills at the right time to CATC," said Sophie Minich, CIRI chief operating officer and CATC president. "We are very pleased to have him head up CATC's numerous, diverse and growing operations."

Paul Landis

Following an exhaustive search, Landis was selected for the position based on his strong operational and marketing skills. He most recently served as the chairman of the Alaska Aviation Advisory Board, and has served on numerous other boards, including the Alaska Visitors Association Board.

"I believe I've just been handed the best job in Alaska," said Landis. "CATC provides a network of lodging and adventures that show off the very best Alaska has to offer, and I am thrilled to have this opportunity."

Landis plans to focus on continuing CATC's culture of safety in its operations, maintaining CATC's high level of customer service and meeting a challenging Alaska tourism market with strategic offerings that give customers high value.

A word from the president

(Excerpts from Letter to Shareholders, CIRI 2008 Annual Report)

Dear Fellow Shareholders,

The year 2008 was difficult for CIRI. It was also a difficult year for many other well-managed businesses in our state and country. By the fourth quarter of 2008, the overwhelming problems within many global financial institutions and falling real estate and commodity prices created severe economic turmoil. The sharp business contraction and national recession that ensued impacted CIRI's business interests and investments, but their performance varied widely. CIRI's income from operations, natural resources, telecommunications and other noninvestment sources was generally strong in 2008 and in most cases improved from the previous year. However, these gains were dragged down by losses in the value of CIRI's private equity fund placements and marketable securities.

Consequently, I must now report a net loss for 2008 of $22.8 million. While even unavoidable losses of any kind are unsatisfactory and difficult to report, be assured that CIRI remains a financially sound company. This is in part due to its cash reserves and the small amount of debt the Company carries. It is also a result of the profits it has earned over the years, including the years 2005, 2006 and 2007.

For many years now, CIRI has paid income taxes on its earnings. We realized that liquidating a portion of CIRI's marketable securities portfolio would allow us to rebalance our investment allocations and replace underperforming fund managers while legitimately utilizing the federal tax code to get a sizable income tax refund. Consequently, we liquidated a substantial portion of our marketable securities portfolio at yearend. While I would rather have not experienced the loss in our marketable securities portfolio, the tax benefit, which will be realized in a cash refund of more than $20 million in 2009, is welcomed.

History shows that stock prices can fluctuate widely over the short term, but the underlying value of solid business assets is realized over longer periods. While it is impossible to say with any certainty when the economy and markets will stabilize, we continue to believe that a portfolio of investment securities is a good tool to manage financial assets over the long term and we have reentered the stock market.

That being said, the economic slowdown presents CIRI with unprecedented investment opportunities. Therefore, we must prudently but expeditiously invest in businesses, particularly those that exhibit innovation, produce good cash flows and create value. As I prepared this message, I read with interest the letter of Berkshire Hathaway's CEO, Warren E. Buffett, to his shareholders on Berkshire's performance in 2008. Like CIRI, Berkshire suffered financially in 2008. Buffet says that while he likes buying underpriced securities, he likes buying fairly priced businesses even more. Today's challenging business environment signals that an opportunity to acquire businesses at fair prices exists once again.

Our nation is suffering through a difficult period, but I am confident that the United States will regain its economic footing and recover to enjoy a bright future. We are not sitting still awaiting an economic recovery. We are thoughtfully moving forward on projects that are already in the works. These projects include the development of Alaska's first large-scale wind farm on CIRI's land on Fire Island near Anchorage. Current plans call for infrastructure work to begin on the island this summer. Bucking the current national trend of stagnating development of retail shopping centers, work proceeds smoothly on the build-out and leasing of Tikahtnu Commons, with major retailers Target, Kohl's and Lowe's anchoring the retail and entertainment center. We look forward to the opening of additional stores this spring and summer and to the commencement of construction of the new Regal Theaters with much excitement. We are developing land in South Anchorage and construction has begun on the first major structure at Sonterra, a new Hyatt Place Hotel.

With the guidance of the CIRI Board of Directors, we are not limiting ourselves to those projects already in the works, but are exploring other opportunities that are equally exciting and perhaps transformational for the Company. These projects, in earlier stages of development, focus on potential opportunities utilizing exciting new technologies suited to CIRI's strengths.

I am honored to have the opportunity to lead CIRI, and I feel great responsibility to my fellow shareholders, especially during these difficult economic times. I am grateful for the support shown by my fellow shareholders, the Board of Directors and my colleagues as we work together to ensure that CIRI will continue to benefit shareholders and their descendants for generations to come.

CIRI's best days lie ahead.

Talkeetna lodge chef instructs Anchorage cooking class

Matt Zimny shares four-course meal for local nonprofit fundraiser

Talkeetna Alaskan Lodge Chef Matt Zimny

Talkeetna Alaskan Lodge Chef Matt Zimny led a fundraising event on Feb. 15 for the Zonta Club of Anchorage, a local nonprofit organization that works to advance the status of women. "Zonta's Accidental Gourmet" is a cooking class series hosted annually by the club featuring noted Alaskan chefs.

"Matt did an amazing job teaching his new students and received great feedback on his recipes, his teaching style and overall presence in the kitchen," said Fernando Salvador, Talkeetna Alaskan Lodge assistant general manager and food and beverage director.

The class offers aspiring household chefs a chance to improve their cooking skills, make new friends and learn new recipes. Chef Zimny chose the following four-course menu for the event:

- Appetizer – Blini's with smoked salmon and crème fraiche
- Salad – the lodge's house salad of caramelized walnuts, pears and gorgonzola cheese tossed with mixed greens in a citrus vinaigrette
- Entrée – seared halibut over gnocchi in a sweet corn emulsion topped with a tomato compote
- Dessert – Amoretti-crust chocolate torte

Zimny started as chef of the Talkeetna Alaskan Lodge in early January. Before that, he had been the sous chef at sister lodge Seward Windsong Lodge for six years.

The Zonta Club of Anchorage is a local chapter of Zonta International, an international nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the status of women. Zonta International has more than 33,000 members in more than 1,200 Zonta Clubs in 68 countries and geographic areas.

For more information on the Talkeetna Alaskan Lodge and its award-winning dining, please go to www.talkeetnalodge.com.

CIRI Shareholder News

Lowe's is one of the largest home improvement retail chains in the world, operating more than 1,650 stores in the U.S. and Canada. Its 140,000-square-foot store at Tikahtnu Commons is their sixth store in Alaska.

Kohl's is a national department store chain with 1,022 stores in 49 states. Its 90,000-square-foot store at Tikahtnu Commons is a new entrant to the Alaska retail market.

BestBuy signed a tenant-executed building lease for a 30,000-square-foot store at Tikahtnu Commons in early 2009. BestBuy is a multinational retailer of technology and entertainment products with more than 900 domestic stores. The Best Buy store, which will be located next to Target, is under construction and plans to open the first week of June. Its Tikahtnu Commons store will be its second in Alaska.

A 52,000-square-foot Sports Authority store is under construction at Tikahtnu Commons, and plans to open the second week of May. Sports Authority operates more than 450 sporting goods stores in 45 states, including one completed store and three under construction in Alaska.

PetSmart Inc. recently signed a letter of intent to lease a 30,000-square-foot store at Tikahtnu Commons. PetSmart is the world's largest pet services retailer, operating more than 1,100 pet stores and 132 in-store PetsHotels in the U.S. and Canada. The store will include PetsHotels, Alaska's first pet spa and hotel. PetSmart intends to begin construction this summer, with the opening anticipated in early 2010.

The smaller shop and restaurant pads at Tikahtnu Commons are about 80-percent leased. Signed tenants include IHOP, Great Clips, GNC, Sally Beauty, GCI, Subway, Marble Slab Ice Cream, Gamestop and AT&T. Fruitland Fresh has already opened.

Fisk wins April Stock Will prize

Rachel Fisk won the April 2009 Stock Will participation prize. To be eligible for the monthly $200 prize drawings, shareholders must have a Will disposing of their CIRI shares on file in CIRI Shareholder Relations. The CIRI Stock Will form and instructions are located on the CIRI Web site at www.ciri.com. To verify whether you have a Will on file, contact CIRI's probate staff at (907) 263-5191 or toll-free at (800) 764-2474.

CIRI and Browman are in the final stages of negotiating the lease for a 17-screen Regal Cinemas theater complex at Tikahtnu Commons. Feasibility studies for a hotel at the retail center are also being conducted.

"We have a number of other retailers we're talking with," said Jones. "We should see another surge in interest in 2010 from the projected recovery of the economy and traffic from the theater and anchors."

Lowe's new home improvement store at Tikahtnu Commons opened on April 1. The national retailer is among the many shops and stores opening at the Northeast Anchorage retail center throughout 2009 and 2010.

CIRI Spotlight: Dylan Jackson

CIRI descendant wins state spelling bee

Whatever happens to CIRI descendant Dylan Jackson in the Scripps National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., May 24-29, he's already a winner by virtue of all the hard work that has earned him a spot in the competition there.

Dylan, a sixth grader who attends Nikiski North Star Elementary, earned the trip to the nation's capital by taking first place in the Anchorage Daily News State Spelling Bee in March with the word "impetrate." To win, he went up against more than 150 other third- through eighth-grade students.

"I'm excited and honored to be going to Washington, D.C. I know that success in a spelling bee is a combination of factors, hard work, talent, and some luck. I will continue to study hard and try my best in May," said the 12-year-old.

Dylan was born Nov. 10, 1996. He is the son of Paul and Suzanne Jackson and the grandson of Rita Smagge of Kenai and Louise Jackson of Wasilla. His mother and maternal grandmother are both CIRI shareholders. He has an older brother, Tanar, 13; an older sister, Mandee, 16; and a younger sister, Rylee, 9.

The family lives on Daniels Lake in Nikiski. Dylan is Russian and Athabascan on his mother's side and Dutch and Irish on his father's.

Dylan said he has high regard for CIRI because the corporation supplements the family income, provides scholarships and is a part of many other businesses. He said he appreciates his ethnic heritage because it means subsistence fishing in the summer. "We get fish to smoke, can, and freeze for the winter, and we get to spend time with family."

Dylan enjoys spelling, but his favorite subject is math because it's easy for him. As for spelling, he got started in spelling competitions in classroom spelling bees in the fourth grade. He trains by spending 30 to 45 minutes a day going through the study book and browsing the dictionary. Before a meet, he visualizes himself as the winner. To prepare himself physically, he eats oatmeal, an orange and Emergen-C.

Trying to concentrate in a spelling bee can be nerve-wracking. Dylan's strategy for dealing with the stress is to try to pretend the people aren't there, "and it takes some of the pressure away," he said.

The winner of the Scripps National Spelling Bee is handsomely rewarded. Top prize is $30,000 in cash and an engraved loving cup trophy from Scripps, a $2,500 savings bond and reference library from Merriam-Webster, $3,800 in reference works from Encyclopedia Britannica, and a $5,000 cash prize from the Sigma Phi Epsilon Education Foundation.

Life is more than spelling studying for Dylan. He likes to play soccer and baseball, as well as read, study insects, play video games and add to his bubblegum collection. Throughout the winter, he enjoys snowboarding, snow machining and hanging out with friends. He is learning to play the guitar. He hopes to become an engineer or a video game designer.

The people who have inspired him to work hard are his parents and his teacher, Mrs. Matson, who is "always encouraging me to challenge myself."

Dylan says other inspiration comes from a quote his parents posted on their refrigerator by an unknown author: "Winning is not normal and those who win follow an abnormal path. The discipline, dedication, and sacrifices are incomprehensible to those standing outside, looking in, who are capable of joining the winning team, yet unwilling to pay the price of admission. Winners win because they willingly pay their dues in full, time after time, after time."

He reads the quote "to remind myself that anything worthwhile in life takes hard work."

Dylan's mother said the family has gotten a lot of support. "The response from friends, family, the school, and community have been remarkable! We are all so proud and excited for him."

Is he the best speller in his family? Apparently so. His mom asks him to spell words all the time, he said.

CIHA president joins ATHENA Society

Carol Gore honored for professional excellence, commitment to developing women leaders

Carol Gore displays her ATHENA Society induction plaque with CIRI President and Chief Executive Officer Margie Brown, also an ATHENA member, at the ATHENA Annual Luncheon on April 6.

Carol Gore, Cook Inlet Housing Authority (CIHA) president and chief executive officer, was inducted into the Anchorage chapter of the ATHENA Society on April 6 at its 2009 Annual Luncheon at the Dena'ina Civic and Convention Center. Inductees are selected for their professional excellence, commitment to community and encouragement of the leadership potential of women.

Gore has been developing and managing commercial and residential real estate for more than 20 years. While at the helm of CIHA, she has mapped a new strategic direction for the organization, focusing on developing quality affordable housing and housing programs in the CIRI region.

CIHA established two social enterprise organizations during Gore's tenure. The Cook Inlet Lending Center is a nonprofit organization and community development finance institution. It serves as CIHA's lending arm. Cook Inlet Real Estate Services is a partnership with Re/Max Properties Inc. owner Mark Korting that provides residential sales and buyer services, commercial sales and leasing services and commercial and residential property management.

Gore oversees a staff of more than 80 employees. She has striven to promote the advancement of women into leadership roles at CIHA. There are 13 female interns currently at CIHA, four of which have been hired into permanent positions. Gore encourages her employees to become active members of Soroptimist International of Anchorage, which sponsors programs that improve the lives of women and girls in the community. She has received many awards and serves on five local and national boards and committees.

ATHENA International is an international organization dedicated to supporting, developing and honoring women leaders. The Anchorage chapter of the society has been a program of the Anchorage Chamber of Commerce since 1986, and has 215 male and female members. Inductees are nominated by their peers and selected by past ATHENA Award recipients.

The Anchorage ATHENA Society recognizes one of its members each year with the Anchorage ATHENA Award. It also offers the Camp Start-Up and PowerLink programs, which help teenage women develop entrepreneurial and leadership skills and mentor female business owners.

Cook Inlet Housing Authority offers homeownership services

Many Alaskans believe they are not able to pursue homeownership for various reasons. Challenges may include credit issues, low income or uncertainty regarding the actual purchasing process. Helping families become homeowners is the cornerstone of Cook Inlet Housing Authority's (CIHA) efforts.

Opening doors to homeownership

CIHA strives to ensure that you are successful from the day you apply through the day you set foot in your new home. If you don't know where to start, CIHA can recommend homebuyer education classes, counseling and other resources to help you with credit repair, debt consolidation, budgeting, loan advice and the actual purchasing process.

A brand new home

CIHA is building quality, craftsman-style three- and four-bedroom single-family homes in Anchorage's Mountain View neighborhood. Homes range in size from 1477 to 1529 square feet and feature two+ bathrooms, a two-car garage, a front porch, radiant in-floor heat and a fenced and landscaped yard. These homes promise to be some of the most attractive, well-built and unique smaller homes anywhere in Alaska.

Making it affordable

The financing package on these homes – which combines grants, very-low-interest loans as well as a standard first mortgage – results in monthly mortgage payments that are likely similar to, or perhaps less than, what you are currently paying your landlord in rent.

Let CIHA and Cook Inlet Lending Center help you realize the benefits of homeownership. If you earn less than $76,000 per year, depending on your family size, you may qualify. Minimum income limits may also apply.

Interested?

If you are interested in learning more about the homes, please contact Carole Marvel at Cook Inlet Real Estate Services, a CIHA affiliate and a Re/Max Properties, Inc. Branch Office at (907) 793-3059. To find out more about the finance options for these homes, contact Cook Inlet Lending Center at 793-3058. Or visit our Web site at www.cookinlethousing.org.

Cook Inlet Housing Authority is building houses similar to this one in Anchorage's Mountain View neighborhood.

CIRI Foundation Fall 2009 scholarship and grant deadlines

Applicants encouraged to apply early

The CIRI Foundation (TCF) is encouraging original CIRI enrollees and their direct lineal descendants to apply early for the two upcoming scholarship and grant application deadlines. Please note – the application deadline varies according to your enrollment and education plans. All award amounts are subject to available funding, and late applications will not be considered.

- Students enrolled full-time in a degree-seeking program must apply by the June 1 deadline.
- Students enrolled part-time in a degree-seeking program or full or part-time in a vocational training program must apply by the June 30 deadline.

The 2009 Scholarship and Grant Application, eligibility requirements, guidelines and answers to frequently asked questions can be found on the TCF Web site, www.thecirifoundation.org.

Through post-secondary scholarships and grants, internship opportunities, research and other education projects, The Foundation, as a separate 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, has helped to fulfill one of CIRI's major corporate goals, "to improve the lives of its shareholders." Since its establishment in 1982, The CIRI Foundation has contributed more than $15 million for the Alaska Native beneficiaries of CIRI to participate in post-secondary education.

Contact The CIRI Foundation via phone at 1-800-764-3382 or (907) 793-3575 or e-mail tcf@thecirifoundation.org for more information.
